CONFERENCE REPORT ON BEER BILL APPROVED; PRESIDENT EXPECTED TO SIGN MEASURE TOMORROW

House Acts With Remarkable Speed and Without A Record Vote; Only A Few Scattering "No's" Were Heard in Voting

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 21.—Congress today dramatically voted an end to 13 years of bone dryness when the House approved the conference report on the 3.2 per cent beer bill.

The measure now goes to President Roosevelt whose signature is assured.

However, he won't get a chance to sign it before nightfall, for the Senate recessed before the House acted and Vice-President Garner's signature could not be affixed during the Senate recess and that of the President probably will be attached tomorrow.

Fifteen days after the President signs, the beer will begin to flow where it is not specifically prohibited by state law.

The House acted with remarkable speed and without a record vote. There were only scattering "no's" when Speaker Rainey put the historic question.

The "new deal" in beer and wine begins April 5. On that day, the legalized beverages will be offered for sale in 23 states.

Final passage of the bill puts to an end the Volstead rule imposing constitutional bone-dry prohibition on the country at the close of the World War.

The dries presented virtually no defense against the beer bill. They voted in solid ranks, and while a trifling minority in the House, maintained strong lines in the Senate. On the bill's first passage, legalizing 3.05 beer and wine, the vote was 43 to 30. On approval of the conference report, legalizing 3.2 beverages, the vote was 43 to 36.

Leaders of organized dry societies meanwhile threatened to fight the bill in the Federal courts. They also said privately they expected the legalization of beer to prevent ratification of the repeal amendment. They declared the return of saloons would result in so many abuses as to provoke the people into rejecting repeal of the eighteenth amendment.

President Asks Congress To Continue Federal Unemployment Aid

Washington, D. C., Mar. 21.—President Roosevelt today asked Congress for a continuance of direct Federal unemployment aid to states and recommended the creation of a "Civilian Conservation Corps" designed to put some 250,000 men to work in the national forests.

In a special message to Congress the executive stressed the importance of immediate attention to unemployment relief.

Three duties of legislation he recommended are:

1. For the enrollment of workers by the government for public employment that could be started quickly.
2. Grants to states for relief work.
3. A broad public works, labor creating program.

The third point, President Roosevelt said will be taken up by him in detail later, when he concludes a current study of the financial questions involved.

In order to facilitate grants to states for relief work, the President recommended the establishment of the office of Federal relief administrator "whose duty it will be to scan requests for grants and check the efficiency and wisdom of their use."

"The first of these measures which I have enumerated," the presidential message declared, "can and should be immediately enacted. I propose to create a 'Civilian Conservation Corps' to be used in simple work not interfering with normal employment and confining itself to forestry and the prevention of soil erosion."

Long Awaited Picture Comes To Grand for Two Nights

Heralded as the most extraordinary motion picture ever to reach the talking screen, "Strange Interlude," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's filmization of the Eugene O'Neill drama which ran on Broadway for a year and a half and won the Pulitzer Prize award for the finest play of the season of 1928-29, will be shown at the Grand Theatre tonight.

The principal roles in the talkie version of O'Neill's brilliant psychiatric study are played by Norma Shearer and Clark Gable.

"Strange Interlude" has been called the most daring venture ever attempted in motion pictures, chiefly because of its ultra-sophisticated theme, which deals with a neurotic woman who undergoes a series of intensely dramatic sensual experiences, and also because of its dialogue "asides" in which the actors express themselves politely and then hastily reveal their private opinions, which are totally at variance with the spoken expression. To achieve this effect, Director Leonard first made a "take" in which only the "thoughts" were recorded. Each scene was then taken again with the players speaking their regular lines, the "thoughts" being played back and re-recorded to fit in with the dialogue.

"Strange Interlude" offers brilliant examples of the art of screen makeup for the plot covers a span of some thirty years, requiring the stages of life—youth, middle-age and old-age.

Patten (inset), widow of the multi-millionaire Chicago "wheat king," Axel Peterson (left, with spectacles), a landscape gardener, is shown as he was questioned by detectives at Chicago police headquarters. Peterson, who, police say, confessed to writing the threatening letters, was formerly employed by Charles G. Dawes, banker and former Vice President.

SENATE HOLDS WHIP IN KING CONTROVERSY

Body Can Bring Victory To Either of The Combatants

TERM EXPIRES IN 1937

By William J. Kelly
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

HARRISBURG, Mar. 21.—(INS)—Pennsylvania's State Senate holds the whip hand over the Capitol's most recent internal political fracas—the verbal skirmish between Gov. Gifford Pinchot and his former friend, Dr. Clyde L. King, chairman of the Public Service Commission.

By acting before final adjournment that body can bring victory to either of the combatants. Dr. King, named successor to the late W. D. B. Ainey last year, has not as yet received the required senatorial approval.

An affirmative vote would fulfill the chairman's avowed intention of continuing as head of the commission. His term expires in 1937. A negative direct request that Dr. King resign because his "usefulness is at an end."

But most important of all, definite decision one way or another on the part of the upper branch would make unnecessary what threatens to be a protracted legal battle to settle a highly controversial question.

"Just what will be done if the upper House takes no action before final adjournment?"

There is a wide variance of opinion on the matter. Some of the state's best legal minds differ and the consensus of opinion is that they are bewildered by the problem. Capitol Hill is buzzing over the possibilities. All this can be swept aside by a few minutes of action on the part of an organization-controlled Senate.

In the event that the Senate remains silent, Dr. King and his supporters are of the opinion that he retains the commission throne until officially rejected, whether it be done at this session or at any subsequent time. They turn (Continued on Page 4)

R. F. C. TO TAKE HAND IN BANKS

Washington, D. C., Mar. 21.—Wide scale participation of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation was seen today in the reorganization of banks in the United States now in the hands of conservators. Several thousand banks will be permitted to open for one hundred per cent business under plans for purchase of preferred stock by the Finance Corporation. Many millions of dollars in deposits will be rushed to relief. All banks so opened virtually will have the government's guarantee of their security. In connection with plans for the formation of a new national bank in Detroit, it was stated that the Corporation contemplated the purchase of fifty per cent of the $25,000,000 capitalized in preferred stock; Chrysler and General Motors to subscribe the other half in common stock. This would be made the basis for reorganization of new banks in cities where financial institutions are in the hands of conservators. It was emphasized that dollar for dollar with stock purchased by the R. F. C. must be forthcoming from local sources.

TAX REDUCTIONS ARE ASKED IN MORRISVILLE

G. O. P. Club Also Seeks
More State Aid For Schools

NOW IN THIRD CLASS

MORRISVILLE, Mar. 21.—Members of the Republican Club of Morrisville have gone on record for the reduction of both borough and school taxes.

Common Council and the school board will be asked to use every effort to bring about a substantial reduction.

The Republican organization also advocated and is urging Common Council and the school board to provide work whereby the taxpayers may pay their property and personal taxes by their labor. This, of course, is for the men who are out of work and have no other means of paying their taxes. Councilman Harry M. Lair reported that council has a plan for borough work by which a substantial amount of labor will be used, and in this way many taxpayers will be permitted to work out their levies.

There was a lively discussion on the school tax situation, and members authorized Mayor Stockham to appoint a committee to interview State Senator Hackman and the two assemblymen, with a view of getting more aid from the State for the schools. This committee will make every effort to have Morrisville returned to a fourth class district and thereby gain more State aid than it now receives as a third class district. The committee consists of Mayor Stockham, Dr. Ralph M. Fox, Councilman Charles C. Young, Tax Collector Neal Nolan and Borough Treasurer Watson J. Simons.

The meeting also opposed the present tax law, which makes it necessary for the tax collector to return all unpaid taxes on May 1 to the county treasurer, who later sells the property which can only be purchased by the payment of 25 per cent additional. The Republican Club wants the old law restored whereby the property owners will be given a chance to hold their homes.

Legislature Today Faces Crisis On Legislation Providing Relief Funds

HARRISBURG, March 21.—(INS)—Pennsylvania's General Assembly today faced the alternative of making appreciable progress on relief legislation within the next week or acting on demands for the immediate enactment of plans to be presented by Philadelphia officials.

Senator Samuel W. Salus, Philadelphia, who informed the Senate that "We don't propose to be the political football for anyone," pleaded for Senators, Representatives and the Governor "To get together on some form of legislation."

"If by this time next week we don't have some legislation for relief on the calendar, Philadelphia will come here with its own legislation and demand that it be passed."

Sowers-Conner Bill, To Regulate Manufacture and Sale of Beer, Up in Senate

HARRISBURG, Mar. 21.—(INS)—Designed to regulate the manufacture and sale of brewed and vinous beverages, expected to be legalized in Pennsylvania by April 5, the Sowers-Conner bill was before the General Assembly today.

In conformity with a resolution adopted by the House last night the bill was to be returned today to the special committee which drafted it. Further study will be made and a public hearing will be conducted.

The measure as submitted leaves the power to issue licenses in the hands of the judges of the various counties. Because of the opposition this provision may be taken out and a license commission substituted.

LENTEN SPEAKER GIVES INTERESTING DISCOURSE

Shows How Early Training
Counts in Our Lives

HARRY R. WHITCRAFT

NEWTOWN, Mar. 21.—The heavy and constant downpour of rain on Sunday failed to dampen the ardor of the men of this community, who turned out in large numbers to hear the very interesting and instructive address of Harry R. Whitcraft, Germantown, at the Lenten meeting for men in Arcade Hall. It was the third of this year's series of meetings.

Mr. Whitcraft took as his subject, "What Am I Here For?" In explaining how Providence plans far ahead for the individual's work, he cited illustrations in the lives of Moses, General George Gordon Meade, the hero of Gettysburg; and Rev. Russell H. Conwell, the eminent clergyman, educator and philanthropist, showing how early training fitted them for the prominent roles they were to take in later life.

Mr. Whitcraft has had a long newspaper experience. He was for a time editor of the Sunday School page of the old Philadelphia North American, where he was associated with the late William Jennings Bryan, as well as Dr. William T. Ellis, the noted traveler and lecturer. He was for long time affiliated with the West Philadelphia Sunday School Association and is now editor of the Germantown Bee-Hive.

Sunday's meeting was presided over by Prof. Richmond P. Miller, instructor in the Bible at George School. The special musical numbers were selections by the Presbyterian male quartette, consisting of A. J. Strathlie, LeRoy Suber, Stephen Miller and Lewis Bothwell, who sang "The Pilot of Galilee," "Steal Away," and "Jehovah Reigns."

The speaker next Sunday will be A. L. Wanamaker, Esq., of Philadelphia. He is a speaker of unusual ability, and it is hoped there will be a large gathering of men to greet and hear him. The musical features will include selections by an augmented orchestra. All men and boys are welcome. The hour is 3 o'clock.

CHARM FOR MEN

In these days of equality of opportunity between the sexes, why not a new slogan—"Charm for Men?"

Much has always been heard about charm for women. Indeed, the old-fashioned finishing school existed for the main purpose of supplying this all-embracing commodity to the budding debutante. Without it she might have beauty, brains and pulchritude, yet be socially a wash-out.

One can understand why this was so. Woman's charm has been developed as the chief asset in seeking her life's task, matrimony. It has not been cultivated for her sisters' sake, but for man. Man has been woman's job, and she has prepared herself to win him as baseball players prepare to win the pennant—by intensive training.

Poets and painters have listed the points necessary to charm in women, and women have usually managed to keep abreast of the changing standards. All of these dictators have been men.

No woman has yet risen to tell the opposite sex what it must do to charm fair maidens, but that time may be near at hand. Nowadays women can find a thousand jobs outside matrimony, and many prefer some of the others to matrimony. Man has to face an increasingly dangerous rival—economic independence.

The time is coming when a man who wants to win a really up-to-date woman will have to offer something more than a home or a bank balance. And when that hour is at hand the men with the most charm will win the rarest specimens of femininity.

INTERCHANGE OF CURRENCY

Free interchange of the currencies of Canada and the United States encounters some obstacles at points distant from the international border, but there seems to be nothing to prevent it in the border strip.

Americans cannot be compelled by their government to accept Canadian currency, which is not legal tender in the United States, but their government should be prevailed upon to approve and promote the free interchange of the two currencies. It would be eminently desirable if commercial interests across the line would give their official approval to the acceptance of Canadian currency in the daily transaction of business.

Every argument is on the side of free interchange. Under normal conditions there is no difference in the value of the two currencies. Most of the time the money of the dominion is as valuable as the corresponding American coin or note, and sometimes is worth a trifle more. The difference either way is very small. For free interchange there is the argument that Canadians are inconvenienced and humiliated when their money is declined in the United States. It is not improbable that the United States is losing much Canadian business because of it.

It is just as important to encourage the interchange of money as of the interchange of citizens, and yet the United States has devoted its efforts to making it easy for Canadians to cross the international line.

OUR DAILY FOOD

By JUDGE CORDON

"HOLY FLOUNDER"

A Whale of a Fish.

ONCE upon a time you had fish for dinner only when the man of the house went fishing and came home with luck.

I'd like to see the average man go about the business of bringing home a halibut—a whale halibut just for the instance. Suppose he was lucky and carted home a seven hundred pounder, the modern housewife would be sure to make a fuss, what with having to knock out the bathroom-kitchenette partition, to make room for the beast. Of course, there's always an advantage having it on hand to slice off a steak now and then when you want it. And it always adds to the prestige of the man of the house to be able to pass out halibut steaks to all neighbors in his particular cliff dwelling.

However, modern man doesn't seem to take the interest he should in whale halibut fishing. Which is a pity. Fishing experts have done their share towards brightening the picture. Pacific Coast fishermen are no laggards in the game of catching "Giants of the sea".

Halibut are found in northern waters, as far south as New York and San Francisco. The demand for this fish delicacy has so increased that home fishing grounds are getting a little thinned. Sometimes it is necessary to go almost as far north as Iceland to get these big fellows. One American company sent a fishing schooner up to Greenland a year or so ago, to catch halibut. They caught a full cargo, but the cost of financing that trip didn't warrant making it a regular business venture.

The name halibut, meaning "holy flounder," was probably given to this fish because it was eaten on important religious holidays.

Well, we won't tackle any whale halibuts today—modern kitchenettes being what they are. No, we'll select a nice halibut steak, cut it into pieces of serving size, and simmer them in a skillet or a shallow pan. Cover the fish with boiling water, and season with salt, a little lemon juice, a small bay leaf, and a few whole black peppers.

When the fish is tender, strain off the liquid and save it for the sauce. To make the sauce, brown a little chopped onion in butter, stir in two tablespoons of flour and a cup of the fish stock. Cook this mixture until it is thick, and then add one or two teaspoons of curry powder. Just before serving, add to this sauce a quarter of a cup of cream, or rich milk. Pour it over the fish, and serve.

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

There was an outcry simultaneously from the crowd of buccaners, then utter silence, as Monsieur de Bernis, having withdrawn his sword, placing one foot for the purpose against the body of his fallen opponent, stood erect, grim, breathing a little hard and mopping the sweat from his brow with the sleeve of his fine cambric shirt.

Standing over Tom Leach as he lay coughing out his evil life upon the sands, Monsieur de Bernis ruefully shook his head, and in the silence his voice rang clear.

"Too fine an end for such as you, my Captain."

The last choking of the buccaneer cough was uttered; the twitchings of his body had ceased, and he lay on his back grinning up at the blue sky that was like a dome of polished steel, before there was any movement in the surrounding crowd. After that single outcry, when their captain had gone down, an awed silence had fallen upon those wild men. Accustomed though they were to scenes of violence and to sudden and bloody deaths, there was something in this abrupt passing of their leader to inspire awe in those wild breasts.

Leach had been of such vitality, and had come scatheless through so many fierce encounters that he had seemed almost immortal to the men he led. And here, almost in the twinkling of an eye, behold him stretched stiff and stark. Wonder, too, now that the thing was done, was stirring in their minds as to what must be the consequences to themselves of their Captain's death.

The silence endured until Bundry roughly now broke his way through the ranks which yielded as readily as earlier they had resisted him. Ellis and Halliwell followed through the gap his passage made.

Monsieur de Bernis looked up at their approach. He was not entirely without alarm, although he contrived to conceal it; but in the main he conceived himself sufficiently protected by the circumstances. Standing where he did, with one shoulder to the sea and the other to the woods, he commanded a wide field of vision. Twenty yards away and above him on the beach, he beheld Miss Priscilla and the Major standing at gaze, and he conceived the fears that must be distressing her, if not on his account, at least on her own, since even now, if this affair should find issue in avenging upon him of the Captain's death, she must suppose that she would be left at the mercy of these ruffians.

For the moment, however, the buccaners still made no movement. Perhaps they considered that the matter was one beyond their judgment, and they were content to leave it to those four leaders who were now confronting Monsieur de Bernis within the space ringed about. For Wogan was there too, having been there indeed throughout the combat, and it was Wogan whom de Bernis immediately cited as a witness in his own defence when Bundry challenged him.

"How did this happen?" Bundry had asked, his tone harsh, his countenance forbidding, his eyes piercing as gimlets.

"It was forced upon me. I take Wogan here to witness."

Bundry turned to question Wogan with his eyes, and Wogan blinked nervously and answered, as de Bernis counted that he would answer. He might have been less confident had he known of the understanding that had existed between Wogan and the Captain. But the Captain being dead, Wogan swiftly made up his mind that, since Leach's plot had failed, it only remained to ensure the preservation of one upon whom depended the capture of the Spanish plate fleet.

"Aye, it's the truth. Bad cess to it! Ye all know how the Captain was feeling towards him, and this morning his humour bubbled over, and he put this quarrel upon him. In fact, as some of ye may have seen, he attacked him before he had even got his sword out, and if Charley hadn't been quick and active, it's murder there would have been."

Encouraged by this to greater self-assertion, Monsieur de Bernis supplemented that assurance.

"It would have been unlucky for all of you if things had fallen out otherwise. There would have been no Spanish gold, no broad pieces of eight for you if Leach had killed me as he intended. The dog might have thought of you if he had no thought for his own share of the treasure before yielding to his thirst for my blood. Well, well! He touched the body with his foot."

"There he lies as he deserves, for his treachery to you and to me!" And Bundry, grim-faced ever, and seeing no profit in going against de Bernis at present, nodded slowly. "I warned him. But he was ever a headstrong fool. Maybe he's best quieted."

And by the men who had listened and who had been persuaded by what they heard, this seemed to be accounted a sufficient verbal oration, and closed the matter.

Monsieur de Bernis had been reasonably confident that ultimately he must prevail with them, by means of the prospect of that Spanish gold. But he had expected at the outset a violent explosion of passion over the death of their leader, and he had been bracing himself to meet it. It took him by surprise to discover how little any such effort would be required of him. In the circumstances in which it had befallen, Tom Leach's death was no calamity to any of those predatory rogues who followed him. What mattered was that the man who was to lead them to fortune had been preserved.

And so, with scarcely a lowering glance to follow him, Monsieur de Bernis was permitted to sheathe his sword and resume his garments. The buccaners broke up the circle and fell into babbling groups, busily discussing the event, its details and its consequences. Already even sounds of laughter began to punctuate their arguments, whilst the dead man lay there almost at their feet, staring up at them from glazing eyes. Wogan actually came to help Monsieur de Bernis into his coat.

They were at some little distance from the others, and Wogan, with his back to them, muttered so that only de Bernis could hear him.

"You'll come to the hut presently. We'll be after electing a new captain, and you'll be needed." More softly still he added: "Ye'll not be forgetting how I stood your friend, Charley, just now when we called upon me, and that but for me ye might be carrion this minute. Sure, now didn't your life hang upon my answer?"

ODD MATERIALS AND COLORS TO FEATURE APRONS FOR MILADY

By Alice Langelle
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—(INS)—The dainty little apron is going to be the darling of the French dressmaking this spring but, of course, it has nothing to do with the annual housecleaning just about to take place.

It's a most charming little affair to be put on for the smart tea at home, very often of printed crepe de chine with miniature pocket on either side. Sheerest chiffon, finely pleated, also makes attractive aprons that tie in the back and are generally worn over well-cut black satin frocks.

Besides pretty prints there are some lovely shades such as burnt-orange, lime green and cherry red which go to make these little aprons which promise to give Madame a very domestic look this spring.

For morning wear the smartest but-tohale bouquets come of gray or brown feathers worked into large, stiff flowers.

A new sports scarf-pin comes of white silver, chrome or copper, three inches long and with a twist to give it shape.

Ancient Roman hob-nails are turning up again in bags, belts, hats and even fronts of frocks and backs of coats, in silver, brass and copper. Topped round or faceted, they vary in size up to dimes and nickels.

Pieces of string are woven into scarves and twisted to form fancy belts. Four narrow strips of finished leather varnished make a smart one for town wear. The buckle combines the two colors with bright metal in extra large size.

AT ELMER HOME
Mrs. Fox, Vineland, N. J., is spending several weeks with Mr. and Mrs. John Elmer, Cedar street.

GETTING YOUR JUST DESSERTS
HAVE you ever been at "wit's end" in solving your dessert problem? Here are a few suggestions for dishes that can be prepared with the help of preserves, and will solve that question "What will I serve tonight for dessert?"

The first is called "Preserve Pudding." This pudding is extra-nourishing, extra-special, made of sugar and milk and bread crumbs, flavored with vanilla, baked in the oven, and then spread with a thick layer of preserves. On top of the preserves put a meringue. Then the pudding goes back into the oven, so that the meringue will be firm, and delicately browned. Then it's ready—a dish fit for the Queen. And everybody knows that the Queen is a lot harder to please than the King. But they'd both be pleased with a pudding like that.

Where can you find a better dessert than cream cheese, strawberry preserves, and crackers? Nowhere, I say. (Just leave a youngster with a jar of preserves and a box of crackers and see what happens.) A big plate, to begin with. A big heap of cream cheese in the middle. Around the cheese, spoonfuls of rich, red strawberry preserves. Crisp wafers, on another plate. And there—in a jiffy, you have as pretty a dessert as the most artistic hostess could ask for.

Raspberry Plate Cake is another old-fashioned dessert that is a favorite with many. Just spread a thick layer of raspberry preserves in the bottom of a pie plate. Cover with a rich biscuit dough rolled rather thin. Bake in a hot oven (400° F.) until the crust is brown. Turn out onto a plate, jam side up, and cut into wedge-shaped pieces like pie. Serve with plain or whipped cream. Here is one of George Rector's favorites:

Frozen Fruited Cream

1 teaspoon gelatin
1 cup milk
2 tablespoons sugar
Pinch salt
½ cup pineapple preserves
½ cup cherry preserves
½ cup diced banana
1 cup whipping cream
3 tablespoons lemon juice

Add the gelatin to the milk and let stand a few minutes. Add the sugar and salt, and heat until the gelatin has dissolved. Chill, add the preserves and banana, fold in the whipped cream, and add the lemon juice. Turn into a freezing tray of a mechanical refrigerator or pack in a mold in ice and salt and let stand until frozen. Stir once or twice to prevent the fruit from settling to the bottom. The recipe makes 5 or 6 servings.

CLEVELAND INDIANS
ABOUT SAME THIS YEAR

(The following article on the Cleveland Indians is the sixth of a series on major league baseball prospects.)

NEW ORLEANS, Mar. 21.—(INS)—During the past four seasons the war-whoop of the Cleveland Indians has been considerably worse than their bite. Activities of the redskins have caused the brows of Connie Mack and Joe McCarthy to furrow only spasmodically.

To all intents and purposes the situation is the same this year.

Only two deals of any significance were engineered by the Indians during the winter. Roy Spencer came to Cleveland from Washington in exchange for Catcher Luke Sewell. Harley Boss, also a former Senator, will try to land the first-basing assignment.

On the mound the Indians are "well-heeled," assuming that Wes Ferrell signs. Clint Brown and Mel Harder are tested winners. The other hurlers include Oral Hildebrand, a sensation last summer, the veteran finisher, George Connally, and Willis Hudlin, an in-and-out for several years.

Manager Roger Peckinpaugh is earnestly continuing his quest for a winning southpaw. Perrin and Twoogood, a pair of untried kids, are making the bid, but both will probably be farmed out.

Belve Bean, Howard Craghead and Ralph Winegarner are the more likely looking newcomers among the pitchers.

The addition of Cissell and Burnett's general improvement last season gave the inner cordon some semblance of a balance that previously had been lacking entirely. Cissell provided a spark that was also badly needed. Kamm is a fixture at third. Morgan's bat is valuable and he is rapidly learning the nuances of playing first base properly.

Bill Knickerbocker, a star at short for Toledo last year, is the leading new candidate for an infield spot. He is fast and can hit.

Peck is contemplating an important shift in his outfield. Vosmik, Averill and Porter will again patrol the suburbs for the Indians, but the first two will exchange positions, moving to center and left respectively. Mike Powers and the ancient but fleet Charley Jamieson are slated for the alternate garden jobs.

Behind the plate, the newly acquired Spencer and Glenn Myatt will share the chores with Frankie Pytlak filling in occasionally.

So all in all, the Indians are the same old ball club without even a new coat of paint.

CONGRESS TO STAY ON JOB UNTIL THE PROGRAM IS ENDED

Action Determined Upon At Conference Held In White House

MAY BE THREE MONTHS

Four Main Objects To Be Accomplished Is Aim Now

By George R. Holmes

(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, D. C., Mar. 21.—Congress is going to stay on the job until the major part of President Roosevelt's recovery program is enacted into law.

Today, this much was determined into law as a result of last night's round table discussion between the President and Congressional leaders, at the White House.

Some thought it would take two months, some three, but in any event, the special session will run well into the summer.

As outlined, the Roosevelt program falls under four principal headings:

1. Unemployment relief: A special message is expected to be given to Congress today providing for the Federal enlistment of thousands of men in restoration work. This is to be followed subsequently by a measure giving direct aid to the States and a long range public works program.

2. Farm relief: A broad farm relief plan is now before Congress and will be followed later by legislation designed to relieve the farm mortgage situation.

3. Railroads: Legislation is to be framed to speed the consolidation and reorganization where needed and to deal with other general problems of the carriers' plight.

4. Banking: Legislation designed to correct the abuses which led up to the failure and paralysis through which the country has just passed, is to be framed. This problem will follow the one containing ingredients for much controversy, but once accomplished, the President and his advisors believe that, coupled with the balancing of the Federal budget, it will enable the country to move steadily ahead to better times.

The White House conference was attended by most of the leaders in both houses, Republicans and Democrats, as well as Democrats.

When the parley broke up early this morning, the White House made the following statement:

"A most interesting discussion was held between the President and a number of Senators and members of the House of Representatives. The discussion covered many phases of the economic program.

Acting independently, the House by a vote of 126 to 74 passed the Steidle bill providing for a referendum. It would give the voters an opportunity to pass upon all forms of Sunday amusements. The bill was sent to the Senate.

Rep. A. Alfred Wasserman, Philadelphia, put in another blue law modifier providing for Sunday sports. Tickets would be sold on week days and proceeds would go for charitable, relief, religious and educational work.

scheduled for second reading in the House today.

Talbot offered another measure last night to appropriate $2,000,000 for April and May relief. This provision is already a part of his $22,000,000 bill covering the two years ending May 31, 1935.

Rep. Darlington Hoopes, Berks Socialist, introduced a bill to appropriate $200,000,000 for relief.

Senate Holds Whip In King Controversy

to the Supreme Court decision in the Bess-Sheley case during the first Pinchot administration to support this belief.

Others interpret the law differently. They claim Dr. King's term automatically expires with final adjournment of the Senate unless he is officially sanctioned by that body.

The Governor has voiced no opinion but he re-appointed two commissioners, Frederick Gruenberg and George Woodruff, after the Senate adjourned the 1932 special session without taking action.

Attorney General William A. Schnader regards this particular phase of the situation as "a moot question." He advised the Governor to re-name Gruenberg and Woodruff to avoid possible trouble. Some claim the re-appointment was unnecessary.

In the event of no senatorial action, the matter has unlimited possibilities. Governor Pinchot, it is believed, will depose the former friend who told him to "put up or shut up." A fight to the finish is likely to result.

Dr. King, determined to see a showdown, would in all probability appeal to the Supreme Court on the basis of the Bess-Sheley decision.

Here again, the situation would become complicated. The personnel of the State's highest tribunal has changed since the opinion was handed down. New jurists might read different interpretations into the law.

Nevertheless the Senate holds the whip hand if it sees fit to act. So far it has ignored altogether the Governor's request for withdrawal of Dr. King's appointment.

Sizing Up the Reds

By BURNLEY

It takes a hustler to yank a team from the muddy depths of the bottom of the baseball stack. That mud is clinging, horrid stuff that holds on and tends to drag downward, always downward, the floundering hooofs of the under-dog. And it's a hustler they've got to do the yanking for the Cincinnati Reds this year—Owen J. (Donie) Bush.

As our spotlight wheels on the Reds and on Donie, we'd like to shoot it back over the years to the days when Donie was a ball player. He's a little fellow, you know, and the thing that hits you right away when you watch him is his ceaseless activity. As a ball player, Donie always ran out on the field to his position, and always came in a running at the end of the inning. Donie never shambled to his place, never ambled back to the pit. He was always on the move. When he had to get somewhere, he got in a hurry.

There's an innate desire to move along, move along, in little Donie; and that's the spirit Cincinnati needs more than anything else to stir them from the depths. Donie's making no claims for a meteoric rise of the Reds. He says he'll lift them from eighth place, that's all—and maybe do a little better than seventh. You can't call that boasting, but it is no mean job at that.

The most important thing that has happened to the Reds, aside from Donie's taking over the managerial reins, is the acquisition of Jim Bottomley from the St. Louis Cardinals. Bottomley will be in congenial company, for Chick Hafee, the Reds' big bombardier, is his old pal. Bottomley has expressed his eagerness to be out there again with Hafee, doing big things in a big way.

There was some brow-lifting when Bottomley came with the Reds, for he was considered a likely fellow for the very job that Donie himself got. But apparently Bush has no fears on that score.

It appears that the policy of the Reds will be to win as many games as they can right off the reel—or lose as few as they can—so that they may justify themselves before the fans early in the season. Otherwise it is feared they will be playing in wide open spaces in the stands.

Perhaps because of this, Bush hasn't taken on any youngsters to whip into shape. Instead, he's hooked into Harry Rice and Frank Henry, two seasoned players who helped him win the American Association pennant with the Minneapolis club last year. Rice is a left-handed, hitting outfielder, and Henry a southpaw pitcher. Donie thinks a lot of them.

The Reds open the season against the Pirates, and it is rumored that none other than Eppa Rixey, veteran southpaw who enters his 21st season this year, will pitch. Rixey won four of the eight games that the Reds took from the Pirates last year, and proved one of the most effective pitchers in the league against the Pittsburgh batters.

And now we'll see how far Donie's energy will get the Reds.

A Thousand Yous....

WHEN you pick up your newspaper and glance over the advertising you quite unconsciously multiply yourself a thousand times.

In half or three-quarters of an hour you can, figuratively speaking, visit every progressive store in town. You virtually poke your head into every department of every department store. You run into the florist's, the confectioner's, the oculist's, the leading groceries, banks, theatres, all the various places that supply the things that make this the twentieth century and life worth the living. Here is a greater choice in clothing, food, furniture, books, pictures, musical instruments, travel, entertainment, opportunities for investment, the service of public utility corporations than any monarch of old could command.

It would easily take a thousand yous, traveling hard all day, to find out for yourself what the advertisements tell you in a few minutes morning or evening.

Advertisements deserve your attention. They deserve your confidence. Without advertising, the prices you would have to pay for many of the necessities you now buy for small change would make a dollar look like a snowball on the kitchen range.

It pays to read all advertisements in this paper
